

In Kansas, people who have felony convictions are eligible to vote after they've completed their sentence. But many may not know they have a chance to participate in democracy.

It's up to us to spread the word and educate our community about their rights.

Use the QR code to sign up to be a Voting Rights Restoration Ambassador!

ACLU
Kansas

In Kansas, people who have felony convictions are eligible to vote after they've completed their sentence. But many may not know they have a chance to participate in democracy.

It's up to us to spread the word and educate our community about their rights.

Use the QR code to sign up to be a Voting Rights Restoration Ambassador!

ACLU
Kansas

In Kansas, when people are convicted of a felony, they lose the ability to vote. Many people don't know if you have completed your sentence, including probation and parole, you can register to vote.

For many, voting after incarceration can be a true second chance. Democracy is the tool we use to hold those in power accountable.

System-impacted Kansans have first-hand experience with our state's policies, and their voice is vital in our decision-making process.

Learn more and find voting
resources:

ACLU
Kansas

In Kansas, when people are convicted of a felony, they lose the ability to vote. Many people don't know if you have completed your sentence, including probation and parole, you can register to vote.

For many, voting after incarceration can be a true second chance. Democracy is the tool we use to hold those in power accountable.

System-impacted Kansans have first-hand experience with our state's policies, and their voice is vital in our decision-making process.

Learn more
and find
voting
resources:

ACLU
Kansas